To share the joy of Jesus coming

Jesus is about to come. Christmas is coming. Our attention is focused on many activities. We are buried in lots of activities and it is easy to lose the final purpose of our efforts. As everything seems to be important, various tensions arise between us and instead of celebrating the gift of God and other people in our life, the side effect of our important rush is that we withdraw ourselves from relationships. On the one hand, whenever we make others be serene, laughing and happy, we announce God's presence. On the other, we could exchange gifts and yet forget about Jesus. On the contrary, we can focus on our prayer life only to the extent that we never think about sharing time with one another. In this way, we gradually lose touch with those with whom we live and with God Himself. It looks like we need to learn permanently how to find God in our daily lives and how to find our daily lives in our time with God.

Have we ever thought about whether Jesus is welcomed by us? If he came to our Christmas parties, to our celebrations in our homes and church, would He find at least a place for Himself? As we believe, He comes and we even gather in His name, we do shopping and prepare midnight Mass in His name.

Thinking about it, I would say, we need people who will help us to see Jesus. The meeting between Mary and Elizabeth is a brilliant example. Neither of them wanted to impress others or win their esteem. Both of them simply shared the joy of the coming Messiah. Mary helped Elizabeth with on-going house duties, keeping Jesus in her heart all the time. Her faith was joyfully shared with the elderly relative who also was in hope.

This particular meeting in faith helps us to find and keep a perfect balance between daily duties, tensions and relationships with others and with God.
